Karen Chapman is a nationally recognized designer and garden writer who combines her passion for plants with a love of teaching. Her garden, container designs and articles have been featured in Fine Gardening, Gardens West, This Old House, Garden Design (online), a Better Homes & Gardens title and the Sunset magazine blog. She is co-author with Christina Salwitz of the award winning book Fine Foliage and is the Pacific Northwest garden writer for Houzz. When Karen isn't writing or teaching about gardening she can usually be found in her garden where she is still trying to outwit the deer. Karen entertains and inspires with tales of tails, man eating mosquitoes and how she has created her foliage rich garden in just three summers. Learn how she uses foliage as a framework to create focal points and vignettes as well as tips on designing low maintenance, drought tolerant and deer resistant landscapes. Karen is currently working on her next book. For more information: www.lejardinetdesigns.com

David Perry is a Seattle-based photographer, teacher and storyteller with a keen knack for observation and a twinkle in his eye. His thoughtful reverence for beauty is apparent in the pictures he makes and his playful, sometimes irreverent manner of storytelling keeps classroom and lecture audiences on the edge of their seats. He has made his living authoring photographs for more than thirty years and in that time completed assignments for books, magazines, annual reports and ad campaigns in all 50 states and around the world. In the past few years David has begun teaching photography and storytelling at local area colleges in addition to his assignment work and lecturing. His work has been featured in such magazines as Fine Gardening, Sunset, This Old House, Better Homes & Gardens, Flower, Leaf, Garden Design, Pacific Horticulture and Cut Flower Quarterly. David is the photographer and co-creator of The 50 Mile Bouquet, Seasonal, Local and Sustainable Flowers and is currently working on two more books. For more information: <http://about.me/david.perry>
